Ride Profile

General Description

Noting the "Ride Profile" above you see that the steepest climb is toward the 1st summit, the hardest part of which comes in the last two miles – which is really a hard pull, the pitch being steeper than you'll encounter on most paved roadways. The other two high points are easier, followed by a wonderful, nearly 20 mile downhill run back to Prairie City.

Discussion about the profile is just "objective" information, pointless without highlighting the features that make this ride exquisite. During the entire loop you could encounter as few as 0 – 3 vehicles, yet encounter a cattle drive through which a horse mounted cowboy will necessarily "cut" a path for you. Wildlife sightings could include antelope in the open country of the valley, but once you enter the wilderness forest crowding the road edges of most of this route you could see elk, deer, bobcat, bear, panther, porcupine, and every other kind of critter of the remaining American wild west. Mushrooms are abundant here too; morels have been found right along the gravel siding of roadway.
